Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 2

You are developing an ASP.NET application that runs on Windows Server 2012.

An exception is preventing a page from rendering.

You need to view the trace information for the page.

Which two actions should you perform? Each correct answer presents part of the solution.

A. Add the following markup segment to the web.config file:

<trace mostRecent= "true/">

B. Add the traceEnable element to the Internet Information Service (IIS) Metabase section for the application.

C. Load the trace.axd page from the root of the website.

D. Add the following markup segment to the web.config file:

<trace enabled= "true/">

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Explanation

D: You can control whether tracing is enabled or disabled for individual pages. If tracing is enabled, when the page is requested, ASP.NET appends to the page a series of tables containing execution details about the page request. Tracing is disabled by default.

To enable tracing for a page

You can also configure tracing in the Web.config file by setting the enabled, localOnly, and pageOutput attributes of the trace Element (ASP.NET Settings Schema) B: To view trace details for a specific request Navigate to Trace.axd in the root of your application.

For example, if the URL for your application is

<http://localhost/SampleApplication>, navigate to

<http://localhost/SampleApplication/trace.axd> to view the trace information for that application.

Select the View Details link for the request that you want to investigate.
